the Rappahannock is as follows:—The rebels regard the whole affair as a decided success, and as a great triumph of General Lee over Pope. They say that, after defeating McCtellan and compelling him to evacuate the peninsula, General Lee has now defeated Pope and compelled him to retreat to the shelter of the forts at Washington, and that thus the Unionists have been foiled in both of their atmpts to reach Richmond—the one by way of the peninsula, the other by way of Culpopper. Their account states that on the 18th instant General Lee crossed the Rapidan with a strong detachment of his army, consisting entirely of cavalry and artillery, and advanced rapidly towards Culpepper, followed by large bodies of infentry, and indeed by his whole army. During the ensuing six days General Pope retreated slowly towards Centreville. Gen. Lee pressed him close, and battles took place whenever the Unionists made a stand. On the 19th a severe gagement took place near the village of Brandy, four miles south of the Rappahannock, with heavy loss on both sides. The Union army crossed the Rappahannock on the 20th, in great disorder and haste, while the rebel artillery was firing on those brigades which were protecting the passage of the main body. Two whole divisions of Union army crossed under a galling fire, and suffered heavily. On the 21st a portion of Gen. Lee's army, in cluding several squadrons of cavalry and a number of batteries of artillery, crossed the Rappahannock, and en gaged the Unionists at three different points. These acthe Unionists. At Warrenton also a very hard battle was fought, at the close of which the Unionists retreated in disorder, leaving their artillery and their dead and wounded on the field. This account states positively that the robel army occupies, in force, both sides of the Rappaannock, and that General Pope has retreated to fanassas Junction. On Sunday, August 24, the main General McClelian was moving up from Aquia towards Geooquan. It was supposed to be Pope's creek towards Occoquan. It was supposed to be Pope's intention to cross Bull run, so as to place that stream and oquan between his army and the rebels, and te fortify the heights of Centreville. General Lee was watching his movements closely with squadrons of cavalry, but had not pursued beyond the left bank of the Rappa now concentrated for its defence, Washington is entirely beyond their reach. They will probably advance on Cent reville, and attack General Pope there, with the w iew of trying to get the same positions for their army near Washington as they held last fall and winter. But as for attacking the capital itself, that idea they have been forced to abandon. But they have other objects in stating that "entirely too much importance is attached to the rebel raids in Tennessee and Kentucky, and the acsounts of the strength of the rebet forces are much exaggerated;" and the statement has been industriously cired for some days past that General Beauregard is in disgrace on account of his evacuation of Cerinth; that he has been dismissed from the rebel army; that he has

These two statements emanate directly from rebe sources, and are intended to blind and hoodwink the Union generals and to deceive the administration. After the famous seven days before Richmond, General Beauregard did spend a few weeks in retirement at his home; but since then he has been actively engaged in zing the rebel forces in the Southwest for a campaign of great magnitude in Tennessee and Kentucky. It ts understood that the general features of the campaign will be as follows :- To concentrate at Knoxville and at Chattaneoga all the troops not required for service elseplace. To take possession, first, of Nashville, Fort Henry, expel General Buell's forces on the line of the Memphis and Charleston Railread, and thus regain possession of Tennessee. To advance then into Kentucky in two columns -one by way of the Cumberland Gap, Barbours of the valley of the Sequatchie river, in the direction of these columns is to be 150,000 strong. The ultimate (present) destination of the first is Cincinnati; of the

The rebel forces at present in Tennessee and Kentucky are as follows:—At Chattanooga, and between that point and Knoxville, on the railroad, and capable of almost in. stant concentration, there are 93,000 troops, the best in the rebet army, under General Bragg, whose headquarters are at Chattanooga. At Knoxville and vicinity there are 32,000. General Kirby Smith has 20,000 near the Cumberland Gap and on the road between Knoxville and that point. At Decatur, at Clarksville, at Gallatin, at Harts ville and at Murfreesboro there are various bodies of troops amounting to 50,000. This makes 200,000 men in 50,000 of the troops that started with General Jackson for ter and Leesburg shall have returned to Staunton they will be instantly sent by railroad to Knoxville With the fortifications around Richmond, and those that the rebels are now erecting on the right bank of the Rappabannock, they consider their capital impreg. their designs on Washington, well spare these 50,000 troops for service in Kentucky, and, indeed, they may send more; at that is all that Feauregard counts on now. These, with 50,000 new conscripts which he has raised in the Southwestern States, which are now a camps of instruction drilling, and which will be ready mond arrive, will give Beauregard his 300,000 troops. While thus preparing for the military operations of the Western campaign, the rebel leaders are not unmindful o the necessity of preparing for the subsistence of their armies during the winter. On this point also very erroneous views prevail at the North. It has been repeatedly stated that the crops of the South have been short and that most of them have been destroyed by the armies on both sides. So far from this being the case, the very reverse is true. The grain crops throughout the entire and secured in excellent order. The proportion of grain destroyed is scarcely fell in the great aggregate. His and ing cotten this year, the Southern people have devoted their cutire attention to the raising of wheat, corn and oals, and with entire success thus far. In parts of Tennesses particularly the wheat and dats are entirely as always, a bundance of both. A member of the rebol Congress, from Toxas, now in Richmond, says that, coming from a cattle-raising State (a State which has raised this year enough cattle to supply the whole confederacy with beef), he was surprised to see the immense herds of cattle in Georgia and Kentucky, both of which States he visited on his way to Richmond. He learned, too, in Kentucky that the hog crop of that State and Tennessee was fully as large as ever this year. The rebel armies, therefore, will be at no loss for subsistence for 2 year to come. So far as regards the article of salt (which heretofore the rebels have needed more than gunpowder, so scarce has t been), immense quantities have been received at Knox-

Ohio and from Memphis.

That which comes from Ohio and Indiana is an across the Ohio river, and wagened along the reads that run south into Tennessee. That which comes from Memphia comes from robel traders there who profess to be Unionists, and to whom licenses to trade have been

[Correspondence of the Washington Star.]

Falmours, August 25, 1862.

Stragglers who returned last night, say that Jackson has succeeded in pushing a strong force across the Rap. pahannock, eighteen miles above this point, thereby cut ting off communication between Falmouth and Culpepper, by way of the river road.

General Burnside is here, and quietly pushing forward his part of the programme, and when the blow does fall, look out for an eclipse of the seven days battle.

Friday and Saturday, 22d and 23d, we heard fring all day, and reports came in that Pope had captured two thousand of Jackson's men, and driven him back eleven miles. No confirmation of the report has, however; reached here.

miles. No confirmation of the report has, however, reached here.

The natives around here are in high glee at the near approach of the Southern army, and beast loudly of the speedy fall of Washington and the State of Maryland in to Jeff. Davis' hands. Before many days you will hear of the greatest success or of the greatest defeat of the war for the Union army.

Secosh deserters are coming into the federal lines every day, by fives and tens. I saw one last evening who had livedu pon berries and fruit, and slept in the woods by day, and travelled by night, for nearly two weeks. We have the following information as to the rebal army en the Rappahannock:—

Our informant, a man of good judgment, and who saw the enemy's forces cross from the Rapjdan to the Rappahannock, estimates that the whole Confederate army opposed to Pope is under two hundred thousand. He was surprised, however, by the extent of their artillery and transportation and the general good condition of the troops.

transportation and the general good condition of the troops.
Our informant overheard the Confederate officers expressing much variation that Pope escaped them. They said that but for some misunderstanding about orders they would have nabbed him, and that they would not not seen that they would have nabbed him, and that they would not sure they work on Tuesday. Pope's activity in evading them caused their plan to turn out a failure entirely.

In the opinion of our informant, Jackson has quietly slipped away to some new field of operations, and the domunstrations made by the Confederates along the Rappahannock within the last lew days have been mere feints to "amuse" us while he steams off to strike an unexpected blow.

there was some cannonading between Sigol and the enemy at Waterloo, on the Rappabannock, near the White Sul-phur Springs. Since that the enemy has been suspicious-ly quiet, and are quite evidently at some new scheme of pher Springs. Since that the enemy has been suspiciously quiet, and are quite evidently at some new scheme of mischief.

The Confederate cavairy, in their late dash within our lines, stopped at the Warren Green Hotel, in Warre at on and took tea, registering their names, &c., with cool impudence, on Thursday evening, while on their way to Catiett's Station. They were enthusiastically received in Warrenton by the disloyal portion of the citizens. They returned by the same route, earrying with them some three hundred horses and a number of prisoners.

This afternoon we have reas in to believe that already the great bulk of the rebei force that reached the Rappahannock on Weinesday and Thursday last, is far on its way back to Gordonsville.

Yesterday we mentioned the fact that a large body of rebeil artillery (sufficient for an aggregate force from 20,000 to 25,000 strong) was certainly on the march from the Upper Rappanannock, on Friday last, back in the direction of Little Washington. From that point one fine turnpike road leads to Luray, in the valley, and another to Gordonsville, via Sperryville and Madison Court House. The fact that no information has yet reached here showing that any rebeil force had entered the valley, satisfies us that the march of this receding force was to Sperryville, and thence in the direction of Gordonsville.

Since Saturday last nearly all firing across the Rappahannock has ceased. Hardly a dozen shots a day are being fired, and now most of our officers in front believe that on Saturday last Lee, Longstreet, Jackson, &c., quietly "took the back track," going somewhere, no one knows whither.

"Tas to one" to Gordonsville, we think. The signs yesterday were that but a very small rebel force was in our front—hardly enough to keep up the appearance of an opposing torce there.

We have further interesting information of the rebel army. On Thursday last there was an animated discus-sion among the members of Lee's staff to settle the ques-tion where the blame should rest for being outgeneraled tion where the band by Pope.

It seems that Lee and Jackson certainly expected their army to be on Sunday morning, the 17th, precisely where it arrived on Tuesday morning, the 19th. Somebody gave a wrong order or somebody did not promptly act upon a right order. However, the loss of the two intervening days utterly defeated the purpose of their forward provement.

upon a right order. However, the loss of the two intervening days utterly defeated the purpose of their forward movement.

On Thursday last it was conceed in Leo's military family that the movement had been a dead failure, Pope being found in position on the north side of the Rappahannock, instead of being caught upon the bank of the Rapidan, as designed.

The entire force that marched east from Gordonsville was about 80,000 men, not more Appropos: Our loss in the skirmishing of Thursday, Friday and Saturday last, on the Rappahannock, was astonishingly small; perhaps not more than 150 inskilled and wounded, instead of 250, as we thought yesterday.

Requests have come hither for the preparation of buildings to hold perhaps a thousand prisoners, taken by Pope's army so far They are understood to be 900 taken by Sigel on Saturday, at Waterloo, a ford a short distance above Warrenton Springs, when, after allowing a small brigade of the enemy to cross the river, he opened his batteries and closed in his infantry so upon it as that not a man escaped, the whole being either killed, wounded or taken prisoners.

The other prisoners are understood to be 140 of Fitzhingh Leo's marauding band that attacked the train at Callett's on Friday night. We hear that General Pope despatched a pursuing force after Lee before daybroak on Saturday, and that a portion of that force—the Fitzs Ponnsylvania and Second New York cavalry—came up with Lee in time to retake most of our men he had as prisoners, two pieces of artillery of ours he had appropriated a little below Catlett's, two desorters from our side, and one hundied and forty rebel troopers.

It is conceded to-day that Lee (Fitzhugh) took either Lieutenant Colonel Fred. Myers (McDowell's Chast Quartermaster) or Colonel George D. Ruggles, Pope's Chief of Staff. They are amazingly alighted a dark night, ruddy faced, with bright red heads, whiskers and mustaches, about the same size and "build." Lieutenant Colonel Myer's was properly by the side of his train, while, according to th depot, amidst the cheers of the thousands assembled.

General Corcoran was the first to step from the cars, and he was immediately surrounded by the official authorities of New York and a host of his friends, who fairly everwhelmed him with their greetings.

As soon as the regiment debarked from the cars it is scarcely necessary to observe that they were received with the most tumultuous applause. Soldier like, they felt the compilment, but in obedience to the command of their superior officer they fell into line, and held them.

their superior officer they fell into line, and held themselves in readiness for the start to New York. About three o'clock the order, "Forward, march," was given, and the regiment, headed by General Corcoran, embarked on board the ferry boat, which soon landed them at the foot of Cortland street.

The Motropolitans kept back the surging mass of people whe were then congregated, and to their credit, be it said, they retreated "in good order," in order to allow the regiment to pass and reform in Cortlands street. This they did with precision, and in less time than it takes to record the movement, and as they marched to the great point d'appui, the City Hall, where the people were assembled in a grand mass meeting.

Cortlands street and Broadway were decked out in the Stars and Stripes, which floated from every housetop and pinzza along the route. Ladies became so enthusiastic that they hurled myriads of flowers on the regiment en passand, and almost smothered them with the aromatic incense of Flora. In this manner the Sixty-ninth, preceded by the Sixty-ninth Lancers, and headed by Gen. Corcoran and the Common Council, and thousands of citizens on foot, reached the eastern gate
